Alliance to Save Energy Recognizes Metro

The Alliance to Save Energy (ASE) is recognizing Metro's Energy Program with its most prestigious award: 2013 Galaxy Star of Energy Efficiency Award. Our agency's program includes a comprehensive energy management, energy efficiency, renewable energy, operational improvements, innovative technologies, conservation training, and related program elements that leads to a significant reduction in environmental impacts and a clear path towards achieving energy independence. This is one of the nation's highest recognitions for an organization's energy program. The American Public Transportation Association (APTA) nominated Metro. The Alliance to Save Energy is a national coalition consisting largely of industrial, technological, and energy corporations. Alliance to Save Energy's board includes chief executive officers, presidents and senior executives of companies, associations, consumer and environmental organizations, as well as officials from federal and state government, universities and law firms. The award will be presented on October 2, 2013 in Washington, DC.
