Metro Countywide Planning and Development Hosts International Streets Conference

Metro Countywide Planning and Development hosts international streets conference, “re: streets - The New Science of Streets and the Form of the Future City”, in our Board Room on April 5-6, 2013. The conference is jointly organized by the Bauhaus University Weimar in Germany, California State Polytechnic University in Pomona, and the Art Program by Goethe-Institut Los Angeles. Focusing on, experiencing, engineering, designing, and thinking about “the street”, the public conference will serve both as an introduction to the new science of streets and as a basis for discussion about the form of the future city. Eleven speakers from Germany will present case studies focusing on advanced examples and ideas on urban design, street design, as well as re-urbanization on and strategic urban development projects. The Goethe-Institute Los Angeles organized and curated an art program that brings artistic positions on the subject matter into the conference. In addition, Cal Arts is participating with a dance performance on some of the Red Line Stations/Plazas/Mezzanines.
