School Trip: Sinai Akiba Academy Kids Visit RRC

(March 24, 2006) A group of sixth graders from the Sinai Akiba Academy day school in Los Angeles toured the Regional Rebuild Center, recently. John Drayton, Metro's vehicle acquisition manager, leads the students through the facility, where mechanics rebuild vehicles in need of extensive bodywork or maintenance.

John Drayton stops to discuss the many operations that happen at RRC.

The sixth graders try on the orange safety vests before entering the facility. The students are studying the use of alternate fuels, and were interested in learning about Metro's use of CNG buses.

Students wave at Metro workers on break from servicing an articulated bus. The kids rode the bus to Gateway Division 10 to see how buses refuel with CNG. --From Reina Slutske
