What’s Going on with the Wilshire BRT? This Weekend’s So.CA.TA Meeting Has the Answers

By Dana Gabbard | Sep 19, 2013

Due to the Yom Kippur holiday the September meeting of Southern California Transit Advocates is this Saturday, the 21st (normally we meet on the second Saturday). The guest speaker will be a representative of Metro making a presentation on the status of the Wilshire bus lane project. This will start at 2:15 pm at Angelus [...]

Eyes on the Street: New Bus Lanes on Alvarado Street

By Joe Linton | Jun 21, 2021

Installation is underway on 1.6-miles of peak-hour Alvarado Street bus lanes - extending from 7th Street (at MacArthur Park) to Sunset Boulevard (near Echo Park).

Southern California Planning Congress: The Future of Union Station

By Damien Newton | Oct 15, 2011

“The Future of Union Station: Who’s on Board and Where Are They Going?” For decades during the 20th Century, with millions of people traveling westward, Union Station was destined to become a launching pad for the American dream. As one of the most beautiful public buildings in Los Angeles and a local, state, and national [...]

Metro Public Hearings: Bus Service “Changes”

By Damien Newton | Jan 4, 2011

Metro will hold six public hearings beginning February 1 to receive community input on proposed bus service modifications to be implemented on June 26, 2011 or later in an effort to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of Metro bus service. Included in the proposed changes are specific Metro Rail new Expo Line bus/rail interface changes [...]

The Week in Livable Streets Events

By Damien Newton | Dec 9, 2013

Weekends are so packed, and weekdays/nights are so light, that I'm starting to think we should do this on Friday's. Two transit groups have holiday parties, a chance to give back or go caroling, Transportation Committee and more... Monday – Santa Monica city staff will present an update on the Michigan Avenue Neighborhood Greenway. The project will [...]

Review of Last Week's Metro "Service Enhancement" Hearings

By Dana Gabbard | Feb 7, 2011

The Feb. 1st "all regions" public hearing for the June service change proposals had a good turnout. My estimate is it started with about 150 attendees and even with comments limited to just a minute per speaker the whole thing took some 2 and a half hours. I submitted a statement for the record, reproduced [...]
