The MTA Board of Directors has appointed William Waters as the Authority's new Inspector General, replacing Arthur Sinai who retired last year.

Waters has been acting Inspector General since July, running the day-to-day operations of the Office of Inspector General for the MTA.

He joined MTA's Office of Inspector General in 1998 as Deputy Inspector General in charge of investigations. Prior to joining the MTA, Waters had a successful career with the U.S. Department of Justice, Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA).
