FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Cable's "L.A. In A Day Via Metro" Explores Attractions Along Metro Red Line Subway

(Los Angeles) - Chances are you've gone to the Hollywood Bowl for a concert at least once in your life. You've also probably put your hands in many of the celebrity handprints that grace the cement courtyard of Mann's Chinese Theatre. Did you know that these are just two of the attractions easily accessible via the 17.4-mile Metro Red Line subway?

MTA's "L.A. In A Day Via Metro Red Line," which airs on Channel 36 in Los Angeles beginning tomorrow, Dec. 18, will take you on a guided tour of these and many other of L.A.'s most popular and interesting destinations, all within walking distance of the Metro Red Line.

Sure, it's entertaining to watch "L.A. In A Day Via Metro Red Line" hosts Jeff Cole and Heather Hopper romp around L.A., eating, shopping and taking in the sights. But Jeff and Heather point out it's a lot more fun to experience L.A. yourself, and the Metro Red Line is one of the best tickets in town.

Among the destinations "L.A. In A Day Via Metro Red Line" explores are the Hollywood & Highland retail and entertainment complex, which includes the Kodak Theatre, at Hollywood/Highland Station; Grand Central Market at Pershing Square Station; Universal CityWalk at Universal City Station; and Olvera Street at Union Station.

Of course, the Metro Red Line doesn't operate in a vacuum. The show points out that the line is part of the Metro Bus and Rail System. Future shows will explore attractions along the Metro Blue and Gold lines.

"L.A. In A Day Via Metro Red Line" will air on Channel 36 in the City of Los Angeles on Thursday, Dec. 18 at 11:30 a.m., 9:30 p.m. and 11:30 p.m., and on Saturday, Dec. 20 at 6:30 p.m. The show will also be made available to the three dozen other cable stations throughout Los Angeles County.

The "L.A. In A Day Via Metro" series is a joint production of MTA and Channel 36, which is owned by the City of Los Angeles.
