METRO CEO NAMES INNOVATION CHIEF

ENO Foundation CEO tapped to lead Office of Extraordinary Innovation

LOS ANGELES – As a first step in laying the foundation for innovation in transportation, Metro CEO Phillip A. Washington has announced the selection of Dr. Joshua Levi Schank as the Chief of the newly created Office of Extraordinary Innovation.

“Metro has been investigating practical technologies that can help enhance the safety and security of the riding public and our employees,” said Metro Chair and Los Angeles County Supervisor Mark Ridley-Thomas.

“This office will be responsible for thinking about and implementing the most out of the box and innovative things the transportation industry has ever seen in this country,” said Metro CEO Phillip A. Washington. This office will be my Innovative Strike Force Team.

Metro will also be increasing its education to the traveling public empowering them to be an extension of Metro’s eyes and ears on the system.
