Metro Art featured in Los Angeles Magazine

Metro's guided tours of artwork in the Metro Rail system are featured in this month's Los Angeles Magazine as part of its cover story "Hometown Getaways." The tours are cited as something fun and affordable to do in L.A.'s Historic Core. In addition to introducing tour goers to art in Metro stations, the tours also introduce people to both the Metro system as well as TAP—the majority of attendees are first time customers. Led by trained volunteer guides, Metro Art's two-hour long tours provide insights into the artworks, the artists who created them and the processes of making them. While tour programs are commonly found at museums around the world, Metro is the first and only transit agency to benefit from such a program. Free tours are offered the first Thursday, Saturday and Sunday of every month. Read about this month's tours on The Source.
